

Abstract:

The US presidential elections will be held in November 2020.

The US president and his VP will not be elected by people, but they will be elected by electors. In fact, people will elect the electors and the elector will select their presidential candidate. At the end, each of the presidential candidates who gain 51% of the electoral votes of a state, will win that state.

Citizens of each state can register for voting through the Internet, post, or in person.

Each state has a different website for registration. There's also a registration for the citizens who are currently outside of the United States.

Here is a list of election's committee and the state websites